Proclamation 3337

EIGHTEENTH DECENNIAL CENSUS

By the President of the United States of America

A Proclamation

Whereas, pursuant to section 2 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States and chapter 5 of title 13 of the United States Code, the Eighteenth Decennial Census of the United States will be taken beginning April 1, 1960; and

Whereas this Census, which will mark the one hundred and seventieth anniversary of the first United States Census, is required by the Constitution to determine the apportionment among the several States of members of the House of Representatives; and

Whereas during the ten years since the Seventeenth Decennial Census was taken great changes have occurred in the growth, location, and characteristics of our people and in their housing and activities, and these changes have made it more essential than ever before that we have a current inventory of the Nation's people, homes, and other resources to guide us in the future:

Now, therefore, I, Dwight D. Eisenhower, President of the United States of America, do hereby declare and make known that under the law it is the duty of every person over eighteen years of age to answer all questions in the census schedules applying to him and the family to which he belongs, and to the home occupied by him or his family, and that any person refusing to do so is subject to penalty as provided by law.

The sole purpose of the Census is to secure general statistical information regarding the population, its characteristics, and its homes. Replies are required from individuals only to enable the compilation of such general statistics. No person can be harmed in any way by furnishing the information required. Individual information collected in the taking of the Eighteenth Decennial Census will not be used for purposes of taxation, investigation, or regulations, or in connection with military or jury service, the enforcement of school attendance, the regulation of immigration, or the enforcement of any national, state, or local law, or ordinance. There need be no fear that disclosure will be made regarding any individual person or his affairs. For the due protection of the rights and interests of the persons furnishing information, every employee of the Census Bureau is prohibited, under heavy penalty, from disclosing any information which may come to his knowledge by reason of his employment.

Life and liberty in a free country entail a variety of cooperative actions for the common good. The prompt, complete, and accurate answering of all official inquiries made by Census officials should be regarded as one of the requirements of good citizenship.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this fifteenth day of March in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and sixty, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and eighty-fourth.

Dwight D. Eisenhower

By the President:

Christian A. Herter,
Secretary of State.

TITLE 13, UNITED STATES CODE--CENSUS

Chapter 1--Administration

SUBCHAPTER I--GENERAL PROVISIONS

S 1. Definitions

As used in this title, unless the context requires another meaning, or unless it is otherwise provided--

"Bureau" means the Bureau of the Census;
"Secretary" means the Secretary of Commerce.

SUBCHAPTER II--OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

S 21. Director of the Census; duties

The Bureau shall be headed by a Director of the Census, appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Director shall perform such duties as may be imposed upon him by law, regulations, or orders of the Secretary.

S 22. Qualifications of permanent personnel

All permanent officers and employees of the Bureau shall be citizens of the United States, and shall be appointed and compensated under the Civil Service laws and the Classification Act of 1949, as amended or supplemented.

S 23. Additional officers and employees

(a) The Secretary may appoint, without regard to the Classification Act of 1949, at rates of compensation to be fixed by him, as many temporary employees in the Departmental Service as may be necessary to meet the requirements of the work provided for in this title. Census employees who are transferred to any such temporary positions shall not lose their permanent Civil Service status by reason of the transfer. The Secretary shall make all such temporary appointments in conformity with the Civil Service laws and rules.

(b) In addition to employees of the Department of Commerce, employees of other departments and independent offices of the Government may, with the consent of the head of the respective department or office, be employed and compensated for field work in connection with the work provided for in this title.

S 24. Special agents, supervisors, supervisors' clerks, enumerators, and interpreters; compensation; details

(a) The Secretary may appoint special agents, supervisors, supervisors' clerks, enumerators, and interpreters on a temporary basis to carry out the provisions of this title. Such appointments shall be made without regard to the Civil Service laws or the Classification Act of 1949. The enlisted men and officers of the armed services may be appointed and compensated for the enumeration of personnel of the armed forces.

(b) The special agents, supervisors, supervisors' clerks, enumerators, and interpreters appointed under this section shall receive compensation at rates fixed by the Secretary; and the compensation on a piece-price basis may be fixed without limitation as to the amount earned per diem.

(c) The Secretary may authorize the expenditure of necessary sums for travel expenses for attendance at training courses held by the Department of Commerce with respect to any of the work provided for in this title.

S 25. Duties of supervisors, enumerators, and other employees

(a) Each supervisor shall perform the duties imposed upon him by the Secretary in the enforcement of chapter 5 of this title in accordance with the Secretary's orders and instructions.

(b) Each enumerator or other employee detailed to serve as enumerator shall be charged with the collection in his subdivision of the facts and statistics called for on such schedules as the Secretary determines shall be used by him in connection with any census or survey provided for by chapter 5 of this title.

(c) Each enumerator shall visit personally each dwelling house in his subdivision, and each family therein, and each individual living out of a family in any place of abode, and by inquiry made of the head of each family, or of the member thereof deemed most competent and trustworthy, or of such individual living out of a family, shall obtain every item of information and all particulars required for any census or survey provided for in chapter 5 of this title. In case no person is found at the usual place of abode of such family, or individual living out of a family, competent to answer the inquiries, the census employee may obtain the required information as nearly as may be practicable from the families or persons living nearest to such place of abode who may be competent to answer such inquiries.

S 26. Transportation by contract

The Secretary may contract with field employees for the rental and use within the continental limits of the United States of means of transportation, other than motorcycle, automobile, or airplane, and for the rental and use outside of the continental United States or any means of transportation, which means may be owned by the field employee. Such rental contracts shall be made without regard to section 4 of the Travel Expense Act of 1949, as amended (5 U.S.C. 837). The rentals shall be at rates equivalent to the prevailing rental rates of the locality. The rental contracts within the continental United States may be entered into only when the use by the field employee of such other means of transportation is safer, more economical, or more advantageous to the Government than use of his motorcycle, automobile, or airplane in conducting the census.

Chapter 5--Censuses

SUBCHAPTER II--POPULATION, HOUSING, AGRICULTURE, IRRIGATION, DRAINAGE, AND UNEMPLOYMENT

S 141. Population, unemployment, and housing

(a) The Secretary shall, in the year 1960 and every ten years thereafter, take a census of population, unemployment, and housing (including utilities and equipment) as of the first day of April, which shall be known as the census date.

(b) The tabulation of total population by States as required for the apportionment of Representatives shall be completed within eight months of the census date and reported by the Secretary to the President of the United States.

SUBCHAPTER V--GEOGRAPHIC SCOPE, PRELIMINARY AND SUPPLEMENTAL STATISTICS, AND USE OF SAMPLING

S 191. Geographic scope of censuses

(a) Each of the censuses authorized by this chapter (other than censuses of population) shall include each State, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and as may be determined by the Secretary, such other possessions and areas over which the United States exercises jurisdiction, control, or sovereignty. Censuses of population shall include all geographic areas referred to in the preceding sentence. Inclusion of other areas over which the United States exercises jurisdiction or control shall be subject to the concurrence of the Secretary of State.

(b) For censuses taken in the Virgin Islands, Guam, or any possession or area not specifically designated in (a) above, the Secretary may utilize or adopt census data collected by the Governor or highest ranking Federal official, when such data are obtained in accordance with plans prescribed or approved by the Secretary.

S 193. Preliminary and supplemental statistics

In advance of, in conjunction with, or after the taking of each census provided for by this chapter, the Secretary may make surveys and collect such preliminary and supplementary statistics related to the main topic of the census as are necessary to the initiation, taking, or completion thereof.

S 195. Use of sampling

Except for the determination of population for apportionment purposes, the Secretary may, where he deems it appropriate, authorize the use of the statistical method known as "sampling" in carrying out the provisions of this title.

Chapter 7--Offenses and Penalties

SUBCHAPTER I--OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

S 214. Wrongful disclosure of information

S 223. Refusal, by owners, proprietors, etc., to assist census employees

Whoever, being the owner, proprietor, manager, superintendent, or agent of any hotel, apartment house, boarding or lodging house, tenement, or other building, refuses or willfully neglects, when requested by the Secretary or by any other officer or employee of the Department of Commerce or bureau or agency thereof, acting under the instructions of the Secretary, to furnish the names of the occupants of such premises, or to give free ingress thereto and egress therefrom to any duly accredited representative of such Department or bureau or agency thereof, so as to permit the collection of statistics with respect to any census provided for in subchapters I and II of chapter 5 of this title, or any survey authorized by subchapter IV or V of such chapter insofar as such survey relates to any of the subjects for which censuses are provided by such subchapters I and II, including, when relevant to the census or survey being taken or made, the proper and correct enumeration of all persons having their usual place of abode in such premises, shall be fined not more than $500.

Appendix B. The Pretests

Yonkers

The first major pretest for the 1960 censuses was conducted in March and April 1957 in connection with a special census of Yonkers, N.Y. One objective was to test the cost and effectiveness of three versions of a two-visit approach. Another objective was to try out the use of a FOSDIC¹ document in connection with both self-enumeration and enumeration by enumerators. A large number of FOSDIC schedules filled under field conditions were thereby collected for use in testing with the microfilm-FOSDIC-computer system. The Yonkers census also included certain new concepts and questions, e.g., the concept of quasi-dwelling units and a question on address of place of work.

Two schedules were used. Schedule A included a selected list of population and housing items which were asked on a 100-percent basis. Schedule B included a longer list of population and housing items which were asked on a 25-percent sample household basis. Schedule A was designed to be filled by direct enumeration, schedule B by self-enumeration (although in one procedure schedule B was filled by direct interview).

Three enumeration procedures were used. Under procedure I, emphasis was on quick initial enumeration of persons. All persons in the entire enumeration district were enumerated on April 1 and 2, and both schedule A and schedule B were partially completed at this time. About April 8, each enumerator canvassed a new district to complete the schedules which were partially filled out by the previous enumerator (schedule A for all households and schedule B for the sample households).

Under procedure II, the enumerator began his canvass about March 18. He filled out schedule A completely for residents at each household, and left a schedule B at every fourth household to be filled in by the respondent. Beginning April 1, the enumerator visited all dwelling units in a different enumeration district (ED) from the one he originally canvassed and picked up the schedule B.

In procedure III, the enumerator started his canvass April 1. He completed schedule A for each person at the household and left schedule B in every fourth household to be filled in by the respondent. This canvass took about 1 week to complete. Starting April 8, enumerators revisited the sample households to pick up the B schedule.

As a result of the experience in Yonkers, it was learned that enumerators can handle FOSDIC schedules in the field but that respondents themselves had considerable difficulty or reluctance to fill out the FOSDIC schedule designed for this test. The particular two-visit versions tested proved to be quite expensive because such a large proportion of the population was not at home when the enumerator called. The results of the question on address of place of work were not altogether satisfactory.

¹Film Optical Sensing Device for Input to Computers.

One of the procedures tried in Yonkers, and later partially incorporated into the decennial census procedure, was an independent listing of dwelling units by crew leaders against which the enumerator's work was finally checked. This showed promise of improving coverage. The schedules from the test provided valuable material for evaluating and debugging the FOSDIC equipment.

Indianapolis

In connection with a special census in Indianapolis in October 1957, several procedures were devised to check and improve the completeness of coverage. One postal zone was selected and tested with the various approaches.

When an enumerator interviewed a household, he prepared a card giving the name of the household head and the street address. These cards were turned over to the letter carriers, who sorted them into the boxes in which they regularly arranged letters, and who reported the boxes for which there were no cards; these were possible missed households, and the addresses were sent to the field for verification. (The Bureau withheld 2 percent of the enumerators' cards to test the letter carriers.)

A prelisting procedure similar to that used in the Yonkers pretest was used in this same postal zone; the addresses listed by the enumerator were checked against a list prepared by the crew leader prior to enumeration. Again possible omissions were checked in the field.

A third device was use of lists of old-age assistance beneficiaries, juvenile delinquents, and other persons who it was thought might have tenuous connections with established families or who might be expected to live in low income families. These lists were obtained from the city and were checked.

The Bureau also distributed forms through the public school system, asking the school children to have the parents fill the forms.

Two of the measures tested, the check by the post office of addresses enumerated in the census and the independent listing of addresses by crew leaders, appeared to yield substantial improvement in coverage over and above the application of usual census procedures. On the basis of these tests it was estimated that the post office check would add 1.7 percent to the housing units listed and 1.4 percent to the population, and that the check against the crew leaders' independent listing would add 1.9 percent to the housing units listed and 1.4 percent to the population. These overlapped to a great extent so the net increase in population listed was about 2 percent.

The other checks were somewhat less productive in revealing persons who had been missed. However, in a supplementary check in 23 ED's in a part of the city where average incomes were considerably lower than in the test zone, the special lists proved quite useful in indicating missed persons.

Philadelphia

The third major pretest, in Philadelphia, October 1957, was not conducted as a part of a special census requested and paid for by a city but as a Census Bureau project. Its primary purpose was to test alternative question wording and arrangements for the labor force questions. Three different schedules were used by three different groups of inexperienced enumerators. The households in the sample were reinterviewed immediately by interviewers who normally worked on the Current Population Survey, to determine which of the alternative forms gave labor force classifications most like those from the Current Population Survey.

Variations of questions relating to date of marriage and location of place of work were also tried. For the place-of-work question, one approach involved the use of a map on which the respondent was asked to indicate location of the place of work. The major zones of Philadelphia were coded, and it was hoped that the enumerators could mark these codes on the schedules.

The results of this test showed that, although there were no significant differences among the three different sets of labor force questions, the new arrangements of the questions would lead to substantial improvements in coverage of reporting of such questions as occupation and industry. The extension of questions on occupation and industry to the last job held by persons not working at the time of the census was successful as reflected in very low "no answer" rates for such persons, and was incorporated into the decennial census.

The techniques for geographic identification of place of work produced a relatively high proportion of unlocatable addresses and inaccurate responses with respect to distinctions between areas within the city. However, distinctions between inside and outside city limits and between counties had lower error rates.

Hartford City

In a small-scale test conducted in conjunction with a special census of Hartford City, Ind., (population 7,911), in November 1957, the device known later as the Advance Census Report was tried. This was a 4-page pamphlet which was mailed to every household in the city prior to the enumeration and which contained some of the questions which were asked in the census. Hartford City residents were requested to fill these forms and hold them for the enumerator's visit in order to help speed up the completion of the census. Among the items included in the Advance Census Report for the pretest were date of birth, place of birth, marital status, education, occupation and industry, value of home, year built, rent, and cost of utilities.

About 40 percent of the households filled the sheet in whole or in part. Observers of the test felt that even those who did not complete the sheet possibly made use of it in preparing themselves for the enumeration. There was no objection to this procedure on the part of respondents, and it seemed to be particularly effective in the question on value of home.

Memphis

A special census conducted for the city of Memphis, Tenn., in January 1958, provided an opportunity to test self-enumeration in a large city with a high proportion of nonwhite residents. The procedure used was to list all dwelling units in advance of the census date and leave at every unit a schedule to be filled and mailed in on the census date. Some 500 persons were hired and trained for the listing job.

This procedure had been followed in Columbus, Ohio, and Lansing, Mich., during the 1950 censuses. It was tested again in Memphis to determine whether some of the problems that were encountered in 1950 could be overcome by improvements in the procedures.

Approximately 80 percent of the schedules were received in the office by mail within the first 5 days and by the end of the census period 91 percent had been mailed in. All the schedules were edited in the office and callbacks were made by telephone or by personal interview to complete the items required for the special census--name, age, sex, and race. About 13 percent had to be followed up for one of these items. To test the adequacy of the other information, a sample of 10 percent of the schedules was selected for edit of the other items which included almost all of the proposed questions for the 1960 census. About 80 percent had to be followed up by telephone or field visit in order to complete this information. It was possible to do this followup operation by telephone for about 55 percent of the cases; this proved to be a fast and efficient operation as conducted from the office.

The self-enumeration device was then evaluated in terms of cost and quality. The quality was measured by direct interview of a 1-percent sample of households in Memphis conducted by trained Current Population Survey interviewers who checked the labor force items and the coverage of population within households. A second 1-percent sample was checked to measure completeness of coverage of dwelling units.

Another feature of the Memphis test was the city-wide application of the "post office check" procedure that had been tested on a limited basis in the Indianapolis special census.

Part of the Memphis test called for the listing of all visitors in private households to carry out the feature of accounting for every person present in the city on the census date. Individual Census Reports were transcribed in the short-form edit process for visitors shown on these listings with local addresses for usual place of residence. These Individual Census Reports, together with local address Individual Census Reports collected from institutions and transient places, were matched against schedules collected for the address of usual residence and added to census coverage if persons had not been reported previously. This combination of a de facto and a de jure approach, with transients enumerated where they were staying and then allocated back to their home addresses, was adopted as a feature of the 1960 population census.

Another technique for improvement of coverage of both housing units and population was tested as a followup of the Memphis pretest. This technique, usually referred to as a "predecessor-successor coverage check," was designed for use as a quality check rather than as part of the enumeration, and was later made a part of the census evaluation program (see chapter 10). The evaluation program enumerator asked about the living quarters immediately preceding or following the unit being enumerated, by asking whether there were living quarters above or below, to the right or left, in back or in front of the unit enumerated. From the Memphis test it was concluded that this was a potentially useful device for evaluating the census coverage of housing units.

A conclusion from the Memphis test was that although important potential gains might be achieved by the use of self-enumeration in a census, the particular approach followed in this pretest involved problems in obtaining large amounts of office space in the field and also extensive steps for centralized control of field procedures that were not sufficiently well developed for use in the 1960 censuses. Experience was gained on the use of FOSDIC and on various related methods and procedures.

Lynchburg

In order to provide a more stringent test of the use of Advance Census Reports, a special census was undertaken in Lynchburg, Va., in February 1958. In this case, a complete sample schedule was filled for 20 percent of the households; for the other 80 percent a schedule was used which approximated the content of the 100-percent schedule for 1960 as far as it had been determined at that time. In Lynchburg, the Post Office distributed Advance Census Reports to one-half of the households. The sheet contained questions on date of birth, education, occupation, industry, income, veteran status, and housing questions on condition, year built, method of heating, type of fuel, number of bathrooms, tenure, value, rent, and cost of utilities and fuel. A timekeeping program was instituted to try to determine whether there was any saving in interview time through use of an Advance Census Report. A sample of households was reinterviewed by trained Current Population Survey interviewers and by the crew leaders in order to measure completeness of coverage of population within dwelling units.

The population of Lynchburg was very cooperative in furnishing information to the enumerators, but just over one-fifth of those to whom the Post Office delivered the Advance Census Report made some effort to fill it, and there was no evidence of a saving in time in those households.

In addition to testing the advance questionnaire, the Lynchburg pretest provided experience with the use of Individual Census Reports for callbacks, and with the listing of visitors, a household sample, and new wording of some questions.

In May 1958, a group of specially trained enumerators rechecked a sample so that an evaluation could be made of the accuracy of the original responses for selected housing items.

Dallas

A pretest in Dallas, Tex., in March 1958, was primarily to test the relative feasibility of alternative question forms. In this experiment, two small samples of households were interviewed, using two different schedules, in order to (1) make a further test of the employment status questions, (2) try alternative methods of obtaining information on income and place of work, (3) test the response rate on a 5-year versus a 1-year migration question, and (4) try the feasibility of several questions on housing equipment items, for instance, type of heating, presence of air conditioning, etc.

The results of this pretest gave further evidence that the use of a map for coding place of work during the enumeration is not successful. The evidence of the Dallas test together with that from Philadelphia and Yonkers suggested that the only type of inquiry on this item which has a sufficiently satisfactory response rate is one which confines the questions to "inside" and "outside" city or county limits.

Martinsburg

A test was conducted in Martinsburg, W. Va., in October 1958, primarily to evaluate which of three alternative population and housing schedules could be used most effectively in the field. The content was the same on all schedules, and the questions were the same as those used in the 1960 censuses except for modifications in wording and the addition in 1960 of a question on mother tongue of foreign born, and deletion, except in New York State, of a citizenship question.

Very little difference was found in the effectiveness of the different schedules. Actually, enumerator variability was of more significance than differences in the enumerative procedures being tested or the forms on which the census data were recorded.

While the enumerators demonstrated that they could handle and complete enumeration on any of the documents provided, it seemed highly desirable to simplify the schedules and reduce their overall dimensions, which was done for the decennial census.

Estimates of time per household in Martinsburg were 6 to 8 minutes for the households where only 100-percent items were asked and 25 minutes for sample households.

The Martinsburg pretest also involved the use of Advance Census Reports, with more encouraging results than in the Lynchburg pretest.

Coming as late as the Martinsburg test did in the pretest program, a number of the training materials for the decennial census, such as filmstrips, the enumerator's reference manual, and training guides were available for training the enumerators. Numerous revisions in the training material resulted. Also, specifications for the mechanical editing, and for allocation of persons and housing units for which no response had been obtained for a particular questionnaire item, were tested for many items, as were alternative methods of coding and of microfilming and other procedures for data processing.

North Carolina

Catawba and Rutherford Counties in North Carolina were the site of the last of the series of tests of 1960 census procedures to measure unit times and costs, and to provide further evaluation of the wording of the questions, the design of the forms, the willingness of householders to fill out the questionnaires, and the ability of locally recruited enumerators to mark the FOSDIC schedules properly both as a transcription operation and in direct interviewing. Hickory, a city of 14,755 in 1950, was headquarters for the pretest workers.

These counties, with a population of approximately 110,000, were chosen as an area providing an acceptable mixture of urban-rural population, average schooling, and representative racial distribution. It was considered that newspapers and radio stations in the area could provide adequate channels for public information on the census.

This particular test was to evaluate a number of administrative aspects of the field procedures, such as training, inspection, and quality control by the crew leaders, and the time phasing of the various operations.

The pretest also offered a last opportunity to check on the basic census procedures and content: (1) the effectiveness of Post Office distribution of Advance Census Reports to households and the willingness of persons to fill in a few items of information prior to the visit of the enumerator; (2) the problems of enumerators in understanding and following the sequence of procedures for canvassing, transcription, and sample selection; (3) the amount of followup required to obtain acceptable information when sample questionnaires were not returned by mail or were incomplete or inconsistent in some respect; and (4) the need for modification in wording in the questionnaires, especially the forms filled by householders.

Advance Census Reports covering the 100-percent questions were distributed to all households by the Post Office before the enumerators began their rounds.

Enumeration was in two stages. During stage I, beginning February 20, enumerators called on each household and obtained answers to the 100-percent questions either by transcription from the Advance Census Report, or, if it had not been filled in by the householder, by direct questioning. These data were entered on FOSDIC schedules. Enumerators also indicated on the FOSDIC schedule which households were in the sample. Each sample household was given a special questionnaire containing the sample questions, and was requested to fill in the answers and mail the form to the census office.

Stage II, beginning March 11, was accomplished by approximately one-third of the enumerators and crew leaders who worked on stage I. Additional training for the second stage was provided. Enumerators were given a list of all units designated as sample units and were responsible for completing enumeration of these households. Data from the completed questionnaires mailed in by householders were transcribed to FOSDIC schedules. Information for households which did not mail in schedules was obtained by telephone call or visit to the address.

On the basis of a systematic program for observing and evaluating the results, the following conclusions were made:

1. The separation of the enumeration into two stages represented a workable improvement of census field procedure

2. Given reasonable information in advance, the public cooperated in recording the basic facts about themselves and their dwellings as of the census date. The Advance Census Report had been filled out in the majority of cases. Sample households also cooperated extensively by providing in a mailed return the needed additional detail on education, migration, employment, income, and facilities and appliances in their homes, and other subjects. About 75 percent of the sample questionnaires were sent in, and about 20 percent of those that were sent in required no further followup

3. The wording of the questions seemed clear for the most part, but more help needed to be given to householders for finding their way through the questionnaire without doing more work than was required

4. The field review and office quality control procedures seemed to be effective in catching early errors and misunderstanding of instructions and thus correcting erroneous procedures and identifying personnel who ought to be retrained or replaced

From the office in Hickory, the schedules were sent to the Census Operations Office in Jeffersonville where they were coded and microfilmed, thus testing the processing steps planned for the same material in 1960. FOSDIC reading and transcription of the microfilmed data onto tape for the computer, and tabulation on the 1105 computer, completed the testing.

After the North Carolina full-scale test, a limited test of minor modifications in the format and wording of the questionnaires was conducted. In 800 households located in 10 regional headquarters cities, copies of the household questionnaires were distributed to householders with an envelope for transmittal of their completed questionnaires. Two variants of the form were tested for certain questions. One provided for questions to be answered only if they were appropriate (for example, "If you live in a trailer, is it: mobile?--on a permanent foundation?--"). The other provided a check box and required action by the respondent on each item (for example, "If you do not live in a trailer, check here--and continue with next question. If you do live in a trailer, is it: mobile?--on a permanent foundation?--"), together with an instruction in the transmittal that he was to make some mark for each question.

Appendix C. Principal Conferences and Meetings on the 1960 Census Program

Conferences of Census Users

In 1955 and 1956, the Bureau conducted meetings with census users in several major cities of the United States in order to learn of their experience with data from preceding censuses and to obtain recommendations regarding the 1960 population and housing censuses. Meetings were held in Albany, N.Y., Atlanta, Ga., Baltimore, Md., Boston, Mass., Chicago, Ill., Cleveland, Ohio, Detroit, Mich., Los Angeles, Calif., New York City, N.Y., Philadelphia, Pa., St. Louis, Mo., San Francisco, Calif., and Seattle, Wash. Most of these meetings were sponsored by the local chapters of the American Statistical Association and the American Marketing Association and by Chambers of Commerce and other local groups.

The Bureau of the Census presented to the participants at the meetings a statement on the principal questions seen at that time concerning the censuses. A great amount of work was done by the local participants in advance of many of these meetings. Written suggestions were solicited before some of the meetings, and in some areas special task forces were organized that reviewed the various proposals and formulated specific recommendations.

The opinions expressed on most questions varied widely, depending on the particular local problems of the regions and on the interests and experiences of the various organizations and participants. There was general agreement that the number of questions asked in the census should be as small as possible, consistent with obtaining the most necessary data, and that only widely useful information should be collected, and that it should be made available as soon as possible after the census. There was also virtually complete agreement that more statistics should be provided for small areas.

Advisory Committees

In the fall of 1956, the Bureau began organizing a number of advisory groups so that it could draw directly upon the advice and assistance of a large number of organizations, agencies, and individuals from the very first stages of the development of the census program. In addition, some permanent advisory committees to the Bureau included the decennial census program among the topics they considered during the period of its planning and execution.

The principal advisory groups for the 1960 censuses are mentioned below: The members listed served during all or an appreciable portion of the period during which the group met. The agency affiliation shown is that of the member during most of the meetings.

Technical Advisory Committee for the 1960 Population Census.-- This group consisted of 20 individuals selected on the basis of their technical competence and ex-

Federal Agency Population and Housing Census Council.-- This group was established by the Bureau of the Budget to provide a channel whereby Federal agency users of the census data could be kept informed systematically on developments relating to the censuses and could make their needs known in planning for the censuses. More than 30 Federal agencies which make considerable use of decennial census data designated official representatives. Meetings were held as necessary; close liaison was also maintained through all stages of the program by distribution to the members of proposed schedules, draft table outlines, etc., for their review.

Population Association of America, 1960 Census Committee.--In July 1956, the Population Association of America established a committee of six members to consider the technical aspects of the 1960 population census program. The Committee provided advice and recommendations both formally through a number of task forces it established to consider certain subjects--e.g., migration, fertility and nuptiality, journey to work--and informally by making available subject-matter experts for consultation with Bureau staff members. The efforts of this Committee, which continued over virtually the entire census period, until May 1962, emphasized the definition of concepts and the development of detailed tabulation and publication plans. The work of the Committee was financed by a grant from the Population Council, Inc.

Special Meetings and Conferences

A great many ad hoc groups and special meetings were convened to consider special phases of the censuses. They ranged from formal conferences to informal meetings of Bureau staff with representatives of another agency or agencies. Among the larger meetings was the National Conference on Housing Census, February 1956, which was jointly sponsored by the American Municipal Association, the American Society of Planning Officials, and the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials, and which was attended by representatives of 18 private organizations and 12 Federal agencies. In November 1955 and November 1957, members of the staff of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics of Canada and the Bureau of the Census met as a Committee for Joint Study of Selected Census Problems Common to the United States and Canada. In 1957, several meetings were held of a joint committee of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Bureau of the Census to consider plans for the 1960 Census of Housing. In February 1959, there was a Conference on Evaluation of the 1960 Censuses which was an augmentation of the Panel of Statistical Consultants. In November 1959, there was a meeting of a Special Advisory Committee on Congressional District Data which devoted considerable attention to plans for the Eighteenth Decennial Census.

Appendix D. Key Personnel

The Eighteenth Decennial Census involved the work of more than 170,000 persons engaged in thousands of different activities. The work was planned, developed, integrated, and supervised by a relatively small number who had the major responsibility for the various operations.

This list is a directory of the key personnel of the Bureau who carried major responsibility during the census period and who can furnish information on their respective spheres of activities. Taken together, the persons listed here should be able to reconstruct all phases of the work on the 1960 Census of Population and Housing.

The names of the members of the advisory committees whose knowledge and advice on taking the Eighteenth Decennial Census were made available to the Bureau are given in appendix C, "Principal Conferences and Meetings on the 1960 Census Program."

The presentation in the list below is by organizational unit. Where personnel changed during the operation, the dates of their service (during the census period) are included. Some persons who transferred from one part of the organization to another are listed more than once. A description of the organization of the Bureau and the functions of the various divisions and offices of the Bureau which were concerned with the 1960 census program is given in chapter 1 of Part I.

It is usually possible to obtain a very general idea of a particular person's principal functions in the work on the 1960 censuses from the information given in the list, i.e., the organizational unit in which he worked, his job title, and, if he was not in the position during the entire census period, the date he entered or left the position. However, in a great many cases, groups of persons from different offices or divisions worked together as a team on a particular phase of the work, and in a great many other cases the division of labor for a particular project was made on the basis of the availability of personnel, time, and specialized knowledge rather than on the basis of the formal organization of the Bureau. Most of the people listed below were involved in many other census activities besides those indicated by their positions in the organization and their titles.

Appendix H. Cost, Man-Hours, and Progress

The tables on costs, man-hours, and progress are all preliminary. The data were drawn from a variety of sources, some of which were records maintained internally within an operation for the purpose of controlling that activity. Other sources used, such as the official financial accounts, were still in the process of final checking for completeness and accuracy of classification when these data were abstracted from them.

The data presented here are intended to show general magnitudes and quantitative relationships of various activities. Precise inter-table consistency is neither sought nor deemed to be important. For example, the $59,009,000 shown in table 3 for "Field enumeration" is consistent with, but not actually the same as, the $58,989,000 shown for the same activity in table 7.

Numbers are shown to the nearest thousand for convenience; they are not necessarily that accurate.

Does not include payments in 1960 totaling $1,471,190 to two universities to assist in the purchase of 1105 systems compatible with the Bureau of the Census computer systems. Although these were fixed payments entitling the Bureau to fixed fractions of the available time on the two computer systems, they were treated as prepayment of rent. In the accounts and in these tables, this payment is distributed throughout the costs for computer time see table 2C)

-Represents zero.

(Z) Less than $500.

(-Z) Credit (adjustment for overcharge), less than $500.

¹This was not an expenditure. It is a total of accounting figures which were added to and are included in the detailed figures for expenditures in these tables to represent the proportionate share of deterioration of equipment used in the Eighteenth Decennial Census. It should be prorated in the appropriate places by anyone using the figures in the tables; most of this allowance for depreciation is in the figures for cost of computer time in table 2C.

²Eighteenth Decennial Census shared costs are for personnel, equipment, supplies, etc., shared by the 1960 Censuses of Population and Housing, the Survey of Components of Change and Residential Finance (SCARF), the 1959 Censuses of Agriculture, Irrigation, and Drainage, and the censuses of the outlying areas. Estimates of the total cost of (a) the 1960 population and housing censuses (including the censuses of the outlying areas and SCARF and including an estimate of the proportionate share of the shared costs), and (b) the 1959 Censuses of Agriculture, Irrigation, and Drainage are given at the foot of table 2A. Any estimate of the total cost of the Censuses of Population and Housing without SCARF and the outlying areas, or of SCARF alone, or of the censuses of the outlying areas, should include an estimate of the proportionate share of the shared costs.

³Prorated charges for (a) Bureau general expense, i.e., the executive staff and the expenses of certain administrative divisions of Census Bureau which perform services and operations for the other divisions, (b) employees' sick leave and vacations, and (c) employee benefits, e.g., retirement funds (for years after fiscal year 1960).

⁴Prior to fiscal year 1958, approximately $375,000 was spent for FOSDIC development in fiscal years 1951-57: $18,000; $47,000; $82,000; $15,000; $13,000; $45,000; $155,000, respectively.

⁵Prorated charges for (a) division general expense (salaries of division chiefs and their immediate central staffs, and supplies and other charges for their functions), (b) employees' sick leave and vacations, and (c) employee benefits, e.g., retirement funds.

⁶Two Univac I computers, serial Nos. 1 and 13, were traded in on the two Univac 1105's for an $800,000 credit. They were later repurchased: serial No. 13 was repurchased for $248,000, of which $170,000 was charged to the Eighteenth Decennial Census; serial No. 1 was purchased for $120,000 ($3,000 a month for 40 months), none of which was charged to the Eighteenth Decennial Census.

⁷Includes some items used for both the population and housing censuses.

⁸In the case of a number of special censuses of local areas which also served as pretests, only the additional expense incurred thereby was charged to the Eighteenth Decennial Census.

⁹The temporary field offices were furnished with excess office furniture from other Federal agencies. (See section on "Supplies, Equipment, and Logistics" in Part I, Chapter 5, "Other Preparatory Work.")

¹⁰Includes $1,876,000 for direct field costs plus $504,000 for postal services, $243,000 for miscellaneous procurement, and $73,000 for miscellaneous costs.

¹¹See section on "Special Projects" in Part I, Chapter 8, "Processing the Data."

¹²For convenience of administration and accounting, a uniform hourly charge for electronic data-processing time was assessed regardless of whether the work was for the Eighteenth Decennial Census or some other activity. The hourly rate included, in addition to operating and maintenance costs, an amount for amortizing the capital investment. Because capital outlays for much of the equipment were defrayed from Eighteenth Decennial Census appropriations, there were periodic adjustments of charges for electronic data-processing time which had been assessed against the Eighteenth Decennial Census.

¹³See table 8 for detailed figures.

¹⁴Part of this cost is for the 1959 Census of Agriculture.

¹⁵This census was conducted by the Bureau of the Census but almost all costs were borne by the Department of Interior.

¹The classification of areas is based on the 1960 definition of the metropolitan area and the 1950 population of the largest city in the area. The District Offices classified in any one group are those for which more than half the workload was in the specified type of area.

²Computed by adding one-fourth of the stage II unit cost to the stage I unit cost.

³This group consists of only six District Offices which enumerated about 3 million persons, and these estimates are subject to relatively large sampling errors.

Source: Payrolls for a 1-percent sample of enumerators.

HOW TO FIGURE COST OF UTILITIES AND FUEL
 Enter the cost to the nearest dollar

Utilities
 If you don't know exactly how much you have spent and if you don't have records, put down the approximate costs.

Fuels
 If you don't know how much fuels cost per year, one of the following methods may help you figure the approximate costs:

Fuel used	Method
Coal	Multiply number of tons used per year by the cost per ton.
Oil* or kerosene	Multiply number of gallons used per year by the cost per gallon; OR multiply number of deliveries by average cost per delivery.
Wood	Multiply number of cords (or loads) used per year by cost per cord (or load).

NOTE: If you buy fuel in small quantities (such as kerosene by the can or coal by the bag), it may be easier to figure about how much you spend for fuel per week, and multiply by the number of weeks during which it is used.

DETAILED TABLES ON COST OF
EIGHTEENTH DECENNIAL CENSUS

The attached tables contain more detailed figures on cost of the Eighteenth Decennial Census than appear in the corresponding tables 2A-2F in the published 1960 Censuses of Population and Housing: Procedural History. They are final figures which were omitted because they were prepared primarily for internal use and appeared unlikely to be of interest outside the Census Bureau.

See footnotes at end of table 2F.

The estimated total cost of the 1960 Population and Housing Censuses (including the Puerto Rico population and housing censuses and the censuses of other outlying areas and the Survey of Components of Change and Residential Finance, and including an estimate of the proportionate share of the costs shared by these censuses and the agriculture censuses) is $106.2 million. The estimated total cost of the 1959 Censuses of Agriculture, Irrigation, and Drainage is $22.7 million. See footnote 2 at end of table 2F.

Table 2B.--CAPITAL OUTLAY: EIGHTEENTH DECENNIAL CENSUS

(Years ending June 30. Thousands of dollars. Figures may not add exactly because of rounding. Does not include payments in 1960 totaling $1,471,190 to two universities to assist in the purchase of 1105 systems compatible with the Bureau of the Census computer systems. Although these were fixed payments entitling the Bureau to fixed fractions of the available time on the two computer systems, they were treated as prepayment of rent. In the accounts and in these tables, this payment is distributed throughout the costs for computer time—see table 2C)

Table 2C.--COST OF U.S. POPULATION AND HOUSING CENSUSES BY ACTIVITIES, 1958 to 1963

(Years ending June 30. Thousands of dollars. Figures may not add exactly because of rounding. Cost of the 1960 population and housing censuses excluding the censuses of Puerto Rico and the other outlying areas (see table 2D), excluding the Survey of Components of Change and Residential Finance (see table 2E), and excluding those expenses shared by these censuses and by the 1959 Censuses of Agriculture, Irrigation, and Drainage (see table 2A). An estimate of the total cost of the 1960 population and housing censuses including these elements is given at the foot of table 2A)

Footnotes to tables 2A to 2F

- Represents zero.

(Z) Less than $500.

(-Z) Credit (adjustment for overcharge), less than $500.

¹This was not an expenditure. It is a total of accounting figures which were added to and are included in the detailed figures for expenditures in these tables to represent the proportionate share of deterioration of equipment used in the Eighteenth Decennial Census. It should be prorated in the appropriate places by anyone using the figures in the tables; most of this allowance for depreciation is in the figures for cost of computer time in table 2C.

²Eighteenth Decennial Census shared costs are for personnel, equipment, supplies, etc., shared by the 1960 Censuses of Population and Housing, the Survey of Components of Change and Residential Finance (SCARF), the population and housing censuses of Puerto Rico and the other outlying areas, and the 1959 Censuses of Agriculture, Irrigation, and Drainage. Estimates of the total cost of (a) the 1960 population and housing censuses (including the censuses of the outlying areas and SCARF and including an estimate of the proportionate share of the shared costs), and (b) the 1959 Censuses of Agriculture, Irrigation, and Drainage are given at the foot of table 2A. Any estimate of the total cost of the Censuses of Population and Housing without SCARF and the outlying areas, or of SCARF alone, or of the censuses of the outlying areas, should include an estimate of the proportionate share of the shared costs.

³Prorated charges for (a) Bureau general expense, i.e., the executive staff and the expenses of certain administrative divisions of Census Bureau which perform services and operations for the other divisions, (b) employees' sick leave and vacations, and (c) employee benefits, e.g., retirement funds (for years after fiscal year 1960).

⁴Prior to fiscal year 1958, approximately $375,000 was spent for FOSDIC development in fiscal years 1951-57: $18,000; $47,000; $82,000; $15,000; $13,000; $45,000; $155,000, respectively.

⁵Prorated charges for (a) division general expense (salaries of division chiefs and their immediate central staffs, and supplies and other charges for their functions), (b) employees' sick leave and vacations, and (c) employee benefits, e.g., retirement funds.

⁶Two Univac I computers, serial Nos. 1 and 13, were traded in on the two Univac 1105's for an $800,000 credit. They were later repurchased: serial No. 13 was repurchased for $248,000, of which $170,000 was charged to the Eighteenth Decennial Census; serial No. 1 was purchased for $120,000 ($3,000 a month for 40 months), none of which was charged to the Eighteenth Decennial Census.

⁷Includes some items used for both the population and housing censuses.

⁸In the case of a number of special censuses of local areas which also served as pretests, only the additional expense incurred thereby was charged to the Eighteenth Decennial Census.

⁹The temporary field offices were furnished with excess office furniture from other Federal agencies.

¹⁰Includes $1,876,000 for direct field costs plus $504,000 for postal services, $243,000 for miscellaneous procurement, and $73,000 for miscellaneous costs.

¹¹For convenience of administration and accounting, a uniform hourly charge for electronic data-processing time was assessed regardless of whether the work was for the Eighteenth Decennial Census or some other activity. The hourly rate included, in addition to operating and maintenance costs, an amount for amortizing the capital investment. Because capital outlays for much of the equipment were defrayed from Eighteenth Decennial Census appropriations, there were periodic adjustments of charges for electronic data-processing time which had been assessed against the Eighteenth Decennial Census.

¹²Part of this cost is for the 1959 Census of Agriculture.

¹³This census was conducted by the Bureau of the Census but almost all costs were borne by the Department of Interior.
